

From our friends at the National Women's Law Center:

National Women's Law Center

Progressive Leadership & Advocacy Network

Are you dedicated to helping low-income women and their families? Do you advocate on behalf of child care, early education, or gender equity in education, dropout prevention, and career and technical education? Are you working to protect women's access to comprehensive, affordable, high-quality health care and reproductive rights? Do you focus on economic issues affecting women and their families? If so, we are eager for you to apply to PLAN!

The NWLC Progressive Leadership and Advocacy Network (PLAN) program is now accepting applications for our 2010 PLAN training. The PLAN program supports a diverse group of emerging advocacy leaders working to make positive change for low-income women and their families.

Each year, 20 emerging policy and advocacy leaders who have demonstrated a commitment to working to improve the lives of low-income women are selected, on a competitive basis, to attend the PLAN Spring Institute. The PLAN program experience helps participants become more effective advocates by strengthening their leadership and advocacy skills and in-depth policy knowledge.

Apply today at www.nwlc.org/plan.

The PLAN program experience includes:

- Participation in the intensive, three-day PLAN Spring Institute;
- Ongoing strategic leadership, policy, and advocacy learning opportunities; and
- Access to individualized technical assistance from NWLC policy and advocacy staff.

To learn more, please visit www.nwlc.org/plan. For further questions, please contact us at progressiveleaders@nwlc.org.